What's HackHSN?

HackHSN is a hackathon - a collaborative programming competition where teams of up to four individuals work against the clock to build innovative technological solutions to real world problems. Participants will have 8 hours to communicate and work on their project with their team, meeting other people with similar interests along the way. Breakfast, lunch, and dinner will be served along with access to snacks and beverages throughout the day. Once they finish their projects, contestants will submit them for judging. A team of 4-6 judges will analyze all the projects based on metrics such as neatness, creativity, and implementation. Interesting prizes such as drones, gadgets, and cash will be awarded to the winners. At the end of the day, participants leave the hackathon with technical experience, new friends, and the feeling of fulfillment.

Who Will Be There?

It is important to note that HackHSN is open to all participants, regardless of their background or skill, provided that they are either high school students or in the process of completing their undergraduate degrees.

Based on what we have seen at previous hackathons, we expect roughly 90 attendees, with slightly more male participants as opposed to female participants. Naturally, the vast majority of our participants will come from programming backgrounds, though we expect a significant number of graphic artists and interface designers as well. Additionally, we expect quite a few aspiring entrepreneurs to make an appearance.
